Are You Unleashing the Full Potential of Your Document Recognition Solution?

Optimize Your Document Recognition Solution

Document recognition software is today being used by many companies. Companies that have implemented an on premise or cloud version of capture software often realize that they might not save the time and money they initially thought would be possible.

The reason for this is in almost every case not software limitations, but insufficient time spent on education and thereby low competence level of the software users. If your company has implemented document capture software and educated end users in best practice use, you are probably aware of the issue.

Employees with specific business knowledge should focus their time on tasks requiring such knowledge. The tools that these employees work with should make this possible and not shift their focus to other repetitive tasks unrelated to their business knowledge.

Based on experience from hundreds of document recognition customers, we have learned that lack of expert knowledge often lead to the company not reaching the full time and cost saving potential of their document recognition solution. If you are one of these companies, no matter what the name of your recognition software is – itelligence's it.capture service can help you reach the full potential of your solution.
